

like / would like

What's the difference?

like = fancy, prefer, to be fond of

- Questions are formed using do/does:

Do you like apple juice?

Does she like pizza?

- Negations are formed by adding don't/doesn't:

I don't like apple juice.

She doesn't like pizza.

would like ('d like) = subjunctive

- Questions are formed by repositioning „would like“:

Would you like to learn English?

Would he like to go to cinema?

- Negations are formed by adding „n't" to end of „would“:

I wouldn't like to learn English.

He wouldn't like to go to the cinema.

How would you begin the following sentences?

Do you like or Would you like?

_____ American films?

_____ a glass of apple juice?

_____ classical music?

_____ wine?

_____ to see that film on TV?

_____ a glass of wine?

_____ to listen this song?

_____ a cup of coffee?

_____ fish?

_____ jeans?

_____ to go to the station?

_____ some carrots?

_____ to live in Australia?

